EVACUATION OF YORKTOWN.

Attention, friends, while I relate

A circumstance renowned:

Upon the temple, Fame, 'tis wrote,

Where it can now be found.

If my memory's not at fault,

It happened in the Spring.

The Northern States then joyous grew

And made the welkin ring.

Perhaps you all now want to know

What "circumstance" this was,

So listen, and I'll tell you that

Which gained such great applause.

Near Yorktown "George's" army lay

And making great ado,

And getting loads of shot and shell

To give the "rebels" a few.

The "ball" would have been opened

On the fifth of May.

But I am grieved to state to you

The rebels ran away.

On Sunday morning of the fourth,

They left in greatest haste,

They did it quietly, and

For fear they would be chased.

They left their largest guns behind

And stores of ammunition,

And buried shells along the road,

Fit subjects for perdition.

As soon as General George found out

That they had run away,

He sent his hussars after them.

And chased them all that day.

Near Williamsburg they made a stand,

Behind some good "dirt walls."

For anything, they thought, would do

To keep off Union balls.

The battle lasted one whole day,

Charge after charge was made,

And many of our bravest boys

Low in the dust were laid.

Night came upon the scene at last,

And then the smoke cleared;

But we expected that, next day,

The fight would be increased.

But disappointment was our lot,

For sometime through the night,

The "rebels" on Chancellors' gave way.

Which made them think to fight.

According to the "rebel" accounts,

Their text "great stand" will be

Some fifteen miles from Richmond,

On Chickahominy.

Some are inclined to criticize

McCallen's "generalship."

They think that he was too slow,

And let the rebels slip.

Secession's just about "played out,"

Jeff. had better now give up,

For he will have him in the end,

Which is too sweet a cup.

And we are to be Beauregard,

Old Floy, Floyd and ally,

They surely will repeat the day

They opened this grand "ball."

"CHASSEUR."

CAMP NEAR FRANKLIN, Va.

Eds. TRIBUNE:

pany, and passes from company to company, from regiment to regiment, from brigade to brigade, till the whole com-rounds with the word "crackers." Last fall, when on Cheat Mountain, we were kept for several days on half rations.

That we called hard times, but it is no where, compared with this.

Though we are suffering all the privations incident to a soldier's life, it is borne with a fortitude that would have done honor to Seventy-six. Every man in this army has unbounded confidence in

Gen. Fremont. All concur in the belief that he will do all in his power to make his members comfortable as circumstances will allow, and that, at the proper time, he will lead them on to certain victory.

The Fifty-fifth is here. Col. Lee looks as good natured as ever. The boys say that they believe he is the best Col. in the field. Capt. Stevens, of course, is all right; company H says he is the best

Captain in the regiment. It is reported here that the main body of Jackson and Johnson's combined forces, have fallen back to Shenandoah Mountains.

Yesterday a party of Connecticut cavalry, on a scouting expedition, proceeded as far as Montgomery. They report no success in that locality.

LETTER FROM COL. GIBSON.

CAMP BEFORE CORINTH,

May 23d, '62.

Eds. TRIBUNE:

The mighty army of the South-West, still confronts the rebel horde of the little "crucifix." Every day increases our strength and brings us nearer the enemy's works. His morning drums and the watchful call of his sentinels, are heard by our boys on picket, and along the great line of our advance, which is now fifteen miles in extent, there is an almost constant fire from pickets. Almost every morning and afternoon, the war of artillery, tells us of a rebel demonstration.

Our line is a semi-circle, secured by trenches, rifle pits and batteries of heavy guns, and is from one mile and a half to three miles from the rebel camp. The rebel forces are estimated at from 100,000 to 150,000 men.

I conjecture that our men equal theirs, and that we can bring near six hundred pieces of artillery into action. Our large siege guns are placed in position in the advanced works, and concealed. Not one has yet been discharged. When the rebel artillery becomes impotent, we will send forward a battery of six or ten pound guns, and soon drive them off.

Men are wounded every day and occasionally one is killed. Last night Gen.

Foy's outpost was attacked by cavalry, and this morning seven dead rebels were found.

It is still in the power of the rebels to evacuate, but it is the general belief that they will fight us here.

Andrews, the man who split the turkey in two when the General Conference was held in 1844, presided. I know all about that, for I electioneered hard for him in
